The Money Bazaar Endorsed.

Of the small minority of bourgeois who went to the polls on Monday, a sufficiently large proportion voted for the bylaws to give these financial institutions the right to operate in the city. The school board in consequence be able to take one of the first steps toward bringing the school accommodation up to the requirements, and the city council to do a moderate amount of long-deferred street improvement.

The smallness of the vote is not surprising. Turning out to mark ballots is not a favorite pastime of Edmonton ratepayers. In fact they seldom do it in large numbers on an occasion of this kind unless a considerable opposition has developed to the spending proposals. Controversy provokes interest, and brings out both the pros and the cons. The anti-bill was a case in point. The bylaws submitted Monday, hence little active interest in the voting. It is to be supposed that the voters who stayed at home had no objection to the expenditures being made.

A Chance For the Amateurs.

The departure of the professional hockey teams does not necessarily mean that hockey is doomed to "fade out" as a great winter pastime in the West. It may mean precisely the contrary. Hockey was a favorite Western sport when it was played by amateur teams only. It was the interest aroused by contests between teams which played for the fun of playing that made it worth while to commercialize the sport, engage salaried players, and pit these rival combinations in gladiatorial combats for profit.

Amateur hockey has been overshadowed by the professional competitions. There is a limit to the frequency with which one will journey out to the arena to see even a hockey match. The greater the patronage drawn by the professionals, the less chance that amateur sport could attract a crowd. With the professionals out of the way, the amateurs will have a better chance to win popular interest, and to get the moral and financial backing without which an organized sport cannot be carried on even when the players play for nothing.

Western News From The East.

It is still true, it seems, that one must go away from home on occasion to hear the latest news. A member representing one of the Ontario constituencies has been telling Parliament that in the West "conditions are so bad that there is talk of secession".

Unfortunately the gentleman does not appear to have gone into details and specified just what these conditions are, nor whereabouts in the West that kind of talk was being carried on. Those people would surely be interested in some information along those lines. They have had a notion that things were not going at all badly in this part of the Dominion, and their curiosity failed to note any outbreak of secessionist language.

There have been times, of course, when things were not so rosy in the prairie country, and when a hot-head here and there threatened to commit suicide by trying to start a rebellion. Those were the days when Mr. Meighen told us that the fiscal policy of the country was still what he had made it, and what the member in question would like to have a revival. But those days have gone. The outlook in the West is now bright, and it is only in the fervid imagination of the eastern politician that disruption looms.

The Province Should Co-operate.

The city is to make this year a somewhat extensive test of McDermott far sands as material for sidewalk making. The City Council has approved an arrangement whereby the city will secure the tar sands at a price which should make a thorough trial of the material possible without excessive cost to the tax-payers. The policy involved will have the hearty approval of all those who appreciate the advantages of a large tar sands industry, and who understand how largely Edmonton can help or hinder the utilization of the tar deposits at its disposal.

If the tar sands cannot be used for street improvement in Edmonton they cannot be used elsewhere for that purpose. If Edmonton has not enough faith in their usefulness to make an exhaustive experiment, there is no other city which has the same chance that other cities will do so. These deposits are one of the resources of a district immediately tributary to Edmonton. It is up to Edmonton to show that they are a large asset, and good for. If they cannot be used here for footpaths, because of poor quality or high cost, we may as well abandon hope of any large development of that resource for street improvement purposes.

This is a matter in which the city ought to have more than good wishes from the Provincial Government. The Government is the owner of the railway over which the tar sands must be brought out. The rails of that road are rusting out, rather than being worn out by excess traffic. Freight rates are high, and it is difficult to get the tar sands out to the lay-down cost of the tar sands at Edmonton. The Government could offer substantial encouragement to the utilization of these by making a special rate for the tar sands, or by the use of haulage. And the railway would thereby return something more in service than it now renders for the money put into it and the cost of keeping it running.

HARKING BACK TO THE OLD DAYS

She must have been much too old to take affection at his right.

The lovely girl I used to know, but never dared to kiss, the pretty girl, the witty girl, the fascinating girl, the girl at every party that I marveled much to see; sometimes her eyes were staring, sometimes they were brown.

The girl whose home was always at the other end of town.

I never would a hand try or one who dwelt near by, some fellow knew the girl next door, but no such luck had I.

Twice time to walk alone at night seven dreary miles and time.

And hear in earnest hush the host of evil's dismal din.

I do not begrudge the girl, I merely set it down, always knew the girl who lived at the other end of town.

Now times have changed and motor cars rob distance of its right.

And youth can take his sweetheart home and not waste all the night.

But in the days when we were young who passed to would hear unto his dim the last car's warning bell.

Oh, many a cold and cheerless mile I've trudged at break of day.

The weary road, the girl who lived so far away.

Sometimes a hostess to girls, sometimes from fancy's whim.

I'd ask the young ladies home, the fat ones and the thin.

Though there were forty in the throng, no maiden fair I drew.

When I saw "Hed" in houses in the neighborhoods I knew.

I say a smile today, though then I used to frown.

Fate always handed me the girl from the other end of town.

LEVEE HEADED TALK

The United States Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Mellon, speaking at the other end of the Atlantic in Philadelphia, emitted some sound sense about the levee.

Admitting the United States debt to the other people of the world, he said, the obligation is one of common sense and common sentiment.

The United States, indeed, being the best common sense and common sentiment of the country.

Mr. Mellon's speech is a good example of common sense and common sentiment.

He says that the United States is the best common sense and common sentiment of the country.

He says that the United States is the best common sense and common sentiment of the country.

He says that the United States is the best common sense and common sentiment of the country.

"Nature Teeth" Are translucent!

THE artificial teeth which I build into your mouth to take the place of the last ones with which nature provided you in the first place, are not only skillfully made replicas of them, as to form and size, as to hardness and polish. They have another quality which contributes, perhaps more than any one other, to their absolute naturalness.

Translucency—the same transparent quality—the opalescent sparkle of nature's own jewels which distinguish them—that quality has now also been successfully imitated in my "Nature Teeth."

These dentures of mine are perfected artificial teeth. With them you can bite, chew, and smile in perfect confidence and comfort.

The cost of Nature Teeth, whether in plate or in bridgework, is not excessive. Let me give you an estimate.

When your May date-book fills up with a bewildering list of teas, bridges and parties for high brides-to-be when you are longing for just the right footwear for that new satin coat or georgette frock—choose a "Calendar" Shoe. Each month a new model steps out. Invariably it strikes the keynote of fashion and suitability for the current month. This flair for the new and correct is strikingly evidenced in the May "Calendar" Shoe, which stresses black, just when black is superseding the vogue of pastels in Paris.

"GILDA"
Expressing the Maytime Mood in Black and Gold.

Black satin, with its moonlight sheen, was chosen for this slipper. Few fabrics fit the foot with such graceful pliability. Few lend such a luxurious air. Gold and black "brocade" gleams in "leopard" overlays that swirl right up to the instep and are tied with heavy gros-grain silk.

New Japanese Racquet-Wielders; Kansas 'Moses' Defends Youth

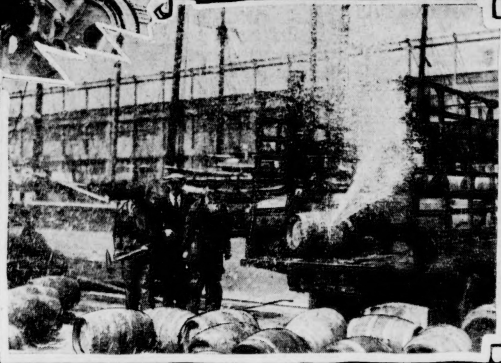

APPARENTLY AWRY but in natural perspective is this view of the huge telescope at Trepow observatory, Berlin. The telescope is the longest in the world. Photo shows the balancing instruments in the foreground, with tube stretching high and far into the air.

MODELED AFTER WEMBLEY. "TREASURE ISLAND", on the place of the same exhibit which attracted so much attention at the British Empire Exposition last year, which is to be one of the features at the coming sesqui-centennial exposition in Philadelphia. The grounds and buildings are rapidly nearing completion.

RIGHT: CARDINAL DU BOIS, archbishop of Paris, who will visit Quebec and other cities of the dominion during his forthcoming visit to the continent in connection with the Eucharistic Congress in Chicago. He is one of the best known prelates of Europe. The photo is the latest of his eminence.

CASK OF REAL PRE WAR and pre-Volstead beer spouting at the army warehouse pier in Brooklyn the other day during the wholesale destruction of a million dollars worth of confiscated liquor, including beer, champagne and whiskey.

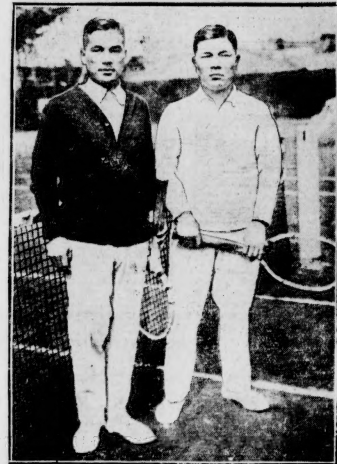

RECORD SPEED GRIND: J. G. FARRY-THOMAS, who covered the one-way mile at a speed of 172.3 miles an hour to break the world's motor record in his 400-h.p. car at Pendine Sands, England, recently.

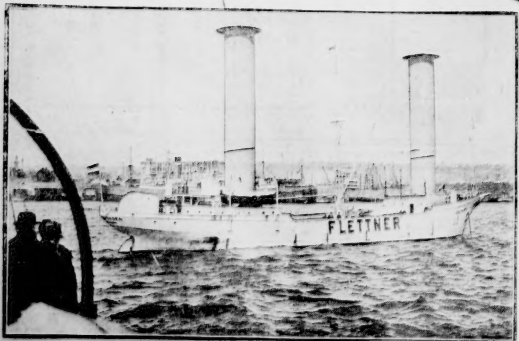

HANDLESS BOY WINS: Vincent DeBlasio, aged 14, who has just been given the 1926 "Philadelphia Boy Award" as the youngster deemed most worthy of being honored this year. The lad, who lost his hands four years ago, has learned to write and to handle tools, winning a woodwork prize at a recent fair.

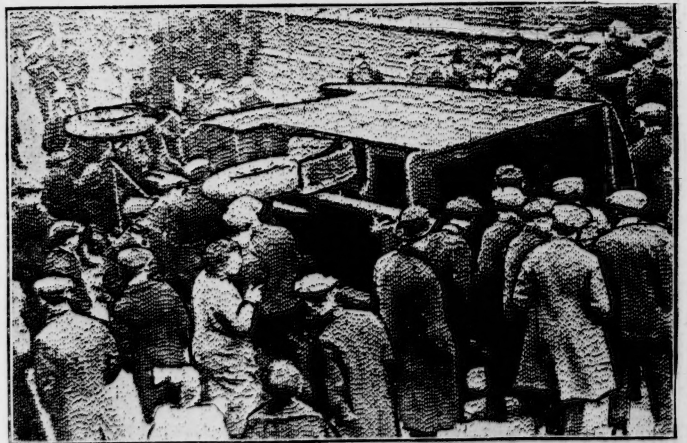

LEFT: MODERN MOSES is Rev. William L. Stridger (shown) of the Lawwood Methodist church, Kansas City. He has issued a new "Ten Commandments" for the church in its relations with youth. "Thou shalt not charge that youth is more wicked to-day than in other generations" is the eighth.

REPRESENT NIPPON: TWO NEW MEMBERS of the Japanese Davis cup tennis team, Toba (left), and Tawara (right). They sailed with the team recently on the annual invasion of the west.

LEFT: LATEST AND BEST photo of the arrival of the rotorship, Baden-Baden, in the New York harbor recently. The peculiar craft, naturally excited great interest along Gotham's waterfront. She took nearly a month to make the transatlantic crossing, depending on the wind to create motive power. Anton Flettner, the inventor, was on hand for the arrival.

STRIKE PRODUCT: OVERTURNED ROYAL MAIL TRUCK in London, England, surrounded by pickets. The photo, which was rushed here by radio, was taken just before the calling off of the strike pending further negotiations between the government and the workers.
